PROJECT: 8712-C

METHODOLOGY: FREE FLIGHT

SUBJECT: PERSIAN GULF ACTIVITY

-----For the second week in a row (correct during the first week), Viewer 079 perceives the week of 1 November as clear, calm, peaceful and devoid of activity directed against US-flagged vessels.

NO SUMMARY

-----Viewer 003 perceived no hostile activity directed against US-flagged vessels; however, 003 did observe a (non-US-flagged) warship lying dead in the water with extensive damage to the superstructure.

NO SUMMARY

-----Viewer 011 perceived a US-flagged vessel being struck by a Silkworm missile on 1 Nov 87 (Sunday). The probability of a vessel being struck by a mine on Saturday, 7 Nov 87, is high. The US will undertake some type of retaliatory activity against Iran during the week of 1 Nov 87.

-----Viewer 099 perceived a US-flagged vessel being hit by a mine during the week of 1 November 1987. 099 perceived casualties resulting from this activity.

Will the U.S. attack Iran in retaliation for events taking place during the week of 1-7 NOV 87? _____ YES!

Will the U.S. attack Iranian SILKWORM MISSILE sites during the 1st week in November 87? _____

There will be hostile actions taken against U.S. flagged vessels operating in the Persian Gulf, during the week of 1-7 November 1987. On Sunday, 1 November it appears that a U.S. flagged vessel is struck by a SILKWORM missile. There will be no hostile action directed towards any U.S. flagged vessels on Monday. There is a possibility of attacks on Tuesday, Wednesday, and on Thursday, but I feel it is unlikely. There will be no hostile action directed against U.S. vessels on Friday. However, the possibility of a U.S. flagged vessel being struck by a mine on Saturday, 7 November is very high.

The U.S. will attack Iran in retaliation for hostile actions during this week. The possibility of the U.S. attacking SILKWORM missile sites exists, but is not imminent.
